Jaipur - The Pink City - is known for its heritage sites, forts and palaces and crafts. In the early 18th century, the city was named as the 'House of the 36 Industries' (Chattis Karkhanas) for being a historical trade centre largely supported by crafts and folk art, including painting, carving and jewellery.

This period shaped the city and is honoured through the dedication of specific streets and markets to each of these industries. Today, this legacy continues to bear witness to the diversity and vitality of the field of crafts and folk art, which employs about 175,000 people working in around 53,500 workshops.

In compliance with Vedic concepts, Jaipur consists of nine blocks corresponding to the nine planets of Indian astrology.

Jaipur's event calendar throughout the year is filled with numerous Art, Theatre, Heritage and start-up festivals, book reading sessions, cultural and educational events. It encourages a stimulating, thought-provoking environment for students, artists and the general public in the city.

All this co-existing with more recent additions such as the Metro, modern shopping malls, multiplexes and institutions of learning provide aspirational opportunities to thousands of local, national and international students.

South. The Eastern gate is called Suraj (Sun) Pol, while the Western gate is called Chand (Moon) Pol. There are only three gates facing East, West, and North including the northern gate (known as Zorawar Singh gate) which faces toward the ancestral capital of Amber.

Jai Singh's descendant Ram Singh II had the town repainted in pink to welcome the visiting Prince of Wales in 1876, as pink was the traditional colour of welcoming guests. Jaipur has been called the Pink City ever since.

Alongside traditional heritage, Jaipur has developed an identity as a hub for creative industries connected with crafts, exports, jewellery, and block printing. Being one of the most uniquely active jewellery and textile markets of the world, Jaipur has been the cradle for initiatives such as Jaipur Bloc and Jaipur Jeweller Artisan Development projects. In 2015, Jaipur was awarded the title of ‘World Crafts City’ by the World Crafts Council (WCC).

Among the popular handicrafts of Jaipur, Blue pottery is the most famous kind of handicraft available in Jaipur. Porcelain clay is used to make artefacts and coloured powder is used in the decoration of these handicrafts but a typically special shiny blue powder is used that gives Blue pottery its fame.

Other handicrafts also include the Lac bangles. Jaipur Lac bangles are known all over the world. The Jaipur Lac bangle work is famous in the area of Tripolia Bazaar and nearby Manihar ki Gali. Most of this work has been limited only to the homes of the artisans.

Lac bangles made up of red and green colours which are majorly worn on different festive and celebrating occasions.

The Bandhani print of Jaipur has its own elegance and importance in Jaipur handicrafts. The suits, fabric and sarees with Jaipur Bandhani print is very famous across the world.

Bandhani prints are famous for its vibrant colours and traditional prints and motifs. Tourists specially come to the city to buy these Bandhani apparels.

Ahead of its time in terms of its city planning, in 1727 AD, Jaipur’s foundation was laid by Sawai Jai Singh, making it the first planned city in India, designed according to the principles of the ancient architectural science of Vastu Shastra.

This magnificent city was conceived not just as the military retreat of feudal warlords but as a commercial city, a business centre of thriving enterprise.

The entire town is based on a square grid plan. The Old Town is confined to a two square kilometre area area within a well-defined city wall and nine city gates, containing magnificent architecture and is one of the most renowned historic planned cities of India from the 18th century.

The directions of each street and market are East to West and North to South. The Eastern gate is called Sun (Sun) Pol, while the Western gate is called Chand (Moon) Pol. The table shows the maximum concentration of designers is in the area of architecture and interior design. The obvious reason is that architecture as a domain of study and practice has been well entrenched for a long time. Many from the architecture profession have migrated to interior design. The HCI numbers seem higher because of the migration of graphic and industrial designers to this domain. The other design domains are coming up fast and soon the numbers will increase considerably in these domains. It would happen faster for fashion design and animation as compared to others.

In India, the vast middle class and almost untapped retail industry are the key forces of attraction for global retail giants waiting to enter new markets. This attraction has stimulated the growth of the retail industry and is growing at a faster rate.

The construction industry, which accounts for approximately 11% of the GDP, has an estimated investment of US $500 billion, and is growing at around 34% annually. The Indian retail industry is the fifth largest in the world, and contributes about 22% of the GDP and generates 8% of employment in the country today. It is expected to grow 25 per cent annually, to be worth US $175-200 billion by 2020.

The key factor driving the demand for Interior Design is the growth & expansion of housing & commercial development in both the major and smaller cities in India. Rising income levels are leading to a demand for creative individuals to support the vision of the Incredible India Campaign. Thus there is an increase in demand for Interior space visualisers and designers to plan & create attractive, practical & desirable spaces for living, display and commercial activity.

The Gems and Jewellery industry in India is the backbone of the economy by being one of the major contributors towards the export-led growth of India. The industry has gained global popularity because of its talented craftsmen, its superior practices in cutting and polishing fine diamonds and precious stones and its cost-efficiencies.

Jewellery designing, manufacturing and trading has been an integral part of our society since time immemorial, and with it has evolved interest in creativity, precision, knowledge of precious and semi-precious stones that was initially confined only to royals and the upper echelons of society.

The Jewellery Design course at ARCH is the epitome of excellence in delivery, facilitating the learning of students by generously exposing them to the traditional crafts of India alongside technology, and inspiring their engagement with the creation of captivating objects of desire.

Jewellery Design is flourishing as a lucrative career like never before and Jaipur is a design, production and market hub for jewellery. We have the designers, the craftsmen, the materials and the investment.

I think that the alumni of Arch are a wealth to the Gems and Jewellery industry. They have performed excellently and have made a niche for themselves.

Constantly evolving, interconnected and complex: these words can be used to describe the creative industries and enterprise of today. To work in such a hyper-connected world requires that techniques used for understanding the environment keep evolving as well.

With curriculum, pedagogy and a learning environment at par with institutions across the world, learners at ARCH are encouraged to develop a realisation of how the attitudes of designers influence their creations. These attitudes are formed by the changing values of society and the cultural context within which designers work. Developing knowledge and understanding local and global issues through research and analysis helps students in identifying and using their creative thinking ability. For an all-round development, a multidisciplinary approach to imparting knowledge is essential. Along with abilities to apply and perform to the needs of the industry and to address the fast changing trends of the professional environment, future designers will need to be equipped with skills for lifelong learning and imbibe aptitudes to adapt, to initiate, to lead and to seek opportunities at every step. Our students constitute the future generations in their chosen field, which makes it all the more important for them to use design thinking as a tool to challenge social, political and ethical conventions.

The following are teaching and learning methodologies utilised at ARCH.

Peer Learning

Peer learning is a two-way reciprocal learning model wherein study groups in collaborative projects work together to help students achieve their goals. Students learn and retain more by exemplifying their ideas to others and by participating in activities in which they can learn from their peers. They develop skills in organising, planning, exhibiting and working collaboratively with others, giving and receiving feedback and evaluating their own learning.

ARCH lays emphasis on intellectual and creative freedom, respect for other’s opinion and freedom of expression through the practice of peer interaction and learning.

Teaching and Learning

Grass Roots connect to Strengthen Basics

Learning at the grass root level from local artisans and craftsmen (some of whom are national awardees) allows hands-on experience of local traditional techniques. Learning from the craftsmen and experts ensures that students absorb India’s rich culture, community awareness and the implications of providing sustainable solutions to the local crafts sector.

The traditional knowledge shared by our craftsmen has enabled ARCH faculty members and students to showcase our heritage at International forums through research papers.

Entrepreneurship

Future leaders in the design industry should possess an amalgamation of information, experience and practice. Providing the right set of tools and techniques in the form of information is the very first and basic step to ensure success. Experience in the form of visits to manufacturing units, design studios, trade fairs, seminars, festivals and exhibitions, provide constant stimulation of ideas and different perspectives. Practice in the form of monthly assessments, in-class open houses and semester end jury. This involves evaluation by a jury comprising experts to interact with students, work on industry brief, systems provide ample opportunities to individuals for benchmarking their performance against themselves and their peers.

Emphasis on Entrepreneurship

Entrepreneurial spirit is characterised by innovation, risk-taking ability, creative problem-solving skills, resourcefulness and emotional skills like empathy. The curriculum at ARCH has synthesised ‘emphatic leadership with social sensitivity’ to develop sensitive social change makers. ARCH faculty members are encouraged to enhance their skills and knowledge to keep the learning process continuous and upgraded. The introduction of a ‘Business Incubation Cell’ to the Jaipur campus provides support to upcoming enterprises to develop the business model base for innovation in design and make it scalable for achieving commercial success through start-ups. The introduction of specialised courses related to ‘Fashion Design and Entrepreneurship’ and ‘Interior Design and Entrepreneurship’ is another step in this direction.

Tools and Techniques

Future leaders in the design industry should possess an amalgamation of information, experience and practice. Providing the right set of tools and techniques in the form of information is the very first and basic step to ensure success. Experience in the form of visits to manufacturing units, design studios, trade fairs, seminars, festivals and exhibitions, provide constant stimulation of ideas and different perspectives. Practice in the form of monthly assessments, in-class open houses and semester end jury. This involves evaluation by a jury comprising experts to interact with students, work on industry brief, systems provide ample opportunities to individuals for benchmarking their performance against themselves and their peers.

Evaluation

The progress and development of the students is assessed through presentations and discussions at critiques, reviews during classroom activities and via semester end jury. This involves evaluation by a jury comprising of industry experts and academicians. The emphasis is primarily on evaluating design solutions to the given brief, exploratory approaches and effective communication. Being able to present and uphold one’s viewpoint is an important asset required for success in professional life. This skill is inculcated amongst our students to help them in strengthening their individual expression. Continuous comprehensive evaluation is a regular feature at ARCH.

Classroom Projects

Classroom projects are an important aspect of curriculum at ARCH, as well as integrate practice-based studio activities which form the core of teaching and learning. The well assimilated interdisciplinary curriculum infuses an in-depth knowledge through research of design and the arts.

A series of projects at appropriate intervals and levels, usually guided by industry briefs and mentorship, are explored throughout the learning process. The commercial viability of the projects is understood by considering costs, the needs of end users, the environment and issues of sustainability.

These projects aim to enhance decision making, problem solving and communication skills of the learners.

Industry Interface

At Arch College of Design & Business we understand the importance of staying ahead and updated. It is highly crucial in the creative Industry and requires constant observation and upgrading of knowledge, developments and concepts.

Students are exposed to a number of opportunities to visit industrial units, export outfits, trade fairs, exhibitions, museums, art galleries and attend symposiums to grasp the latest information related to their fields and to integrate theoretical and practical knowledge.

Another way of enhancing the above process is through inputs from visiting practitioners and industry experts from different domains of the design industry. To enable industry orientation, ARCH invites industry experts and specialists to interact with students, work on industry brief projects, involving industry experts to mentor projects, supporting students for internships and job placements.
Internships

An internship is a period of work experience to give students and graduates exposure to the working environment, often within a specific industry, which relates to their field of study. It allows students to gain valuable work experience, to understand the functioning of the industry, enhance knowledge, and develop problem-solving and decision-making skills. This helps to strengthen the relationship between industry and students. These internships provide a short-term experience to learners, of how it would be, to work in the aforesaid industry.

Students are encouraged to build connections with employers for interviews and placements. The whole process is well coordinated with the industry by the ARCH Industry Interface Cell and guided by the faculty members throughout the training.

Open House

An open house is a day when students from all departments, display their work for the entire community at ARCH. This helps in expanding their horizons to constructive feedback, through interaction with peers and teachers. Students develop their capacity for in-depth and critical analysis for working independently, taking initiatives in applying new ideas and experimenting with new media. The open house also involves a display of students work to an internal and external jury, followed by three best presentations being displayed at the College.

Research Fellowships

ARCH offers research fellowships in fashion, textile, product, interior, accessory, jewellery and gemmology for durations varying from a month to a year. These research fellowships are granted for working anywhere across Rajasthan and states surrounding Delhi NCR in the domain of clothing, products, architecture, jewellery etc. Students are encouraged to consult their academic coordinator and avail these fellowships.
College days are not only remembered for education imparted but also for the life spent beyond education. ARCH also focuses on inner peace required to battle the increasing pressure which a student might come across. No matter what students are studying, it is guaranteed that at some points during their studies, whether undergraduate or postgraduate, such as when writing papers, performing on stage or preparing for exams, they will need high levels of cognitive control, emotional regulation and self-awareness. Ironically, it’s often striving so hard for those things that makes them harder to attain!

Mindfulness training for students provides tools to help them remain calm, sustain their attention, and be able to focus. It does this by helping students pay attention to the present moment through simple breathing and meditation practices which increase awareness of thoughts and feelings so as to reduce stress and anxiety and boost levels of attention and concentration. There is a growing body of empirical evidence showing that it is measurably effective. More and more universities are offering mindfulness training to their students as part of their wellbeing or counselling services. Even the highest ranked universities in the Western world are seeing the benefits, with findings from many studies revealing that mindfulness training improves wellbeing - especially during exam periods.

At ARCH, we agree that mindfulness is incredibly important, so our students start their day with this concentrative meditation which focuses on breathing. Titled as “Anapana”, we ask our students to be mindful of their breathing (ana-pana-sati = inbreath-outbreath-mindfulness) meditation. it is the observation of natural, normal respiration, as it comes in and as it goes out. Anapana provides a tool for our staff and students to deal with fears, anxieties and pressures, and besides helping to calm and concentrate the mind, it help our staff and students to understand themselves better and gives them an insight into the workings of their own minds.
